Subject: Unique Dialogue and Insights at the Winter Meeting, January 29-31

EXPLORE YOUR UNIQUE CONTRIBUTION POSSIBILITIES TODAY!

Meetings of The Toxicology Forum explore topics at the intersection of regulatory policy and scientific research. As the science of toxicology continues to evolve, contributions from scientists like you are vital towards building a better understanding through dialogue. Don't miss this opportunity to have a seat at the discussion, explore the meeting today.

The upcoming meeting program features sessions that highlight a variety of current topics including:

- Advancing Environmental Health Science at the NIEHS/NTP; Presented by Dr. Linda Birnbaum
- Pharmaceutical Regulation Oriented Sessions on "Evaluation of Therapeutics for the Treatment of Severely-Debilitating or Life-Threatening Diseases" and "Use of Alternative Embryo-Fetal Development Assays for Potential Regulatory Acceptance"
- Chemical Regulation Sessions including, "Putting Models to Work: When Can We Actually Use High-Throughput Exposure Estimates?" and "Key Characteristics of Carcinogens: Refining Approaches to Systematic Evaluations of Mechanistic Data"

These sessions and more present unique opportunities for you and your colleagues to learn, discuss, and collaborate on the current issues shaping the future of regulatory policy and scientific research.
